THE EASTERN ELECTIONS.

Indiana.

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct 13.—We have received returns from 89 counties which give a net Democratic majority of 4,578. The same counties in 1872 gave a net Democratic majority of 830. Three counties to hear from gave Hendricks 303 majority.

CHICAGO Oct 13.—The Journal's Indianapolis special says Indiana has undoubtedly given Williams 4,000 to 5,000 majority, while the Republican gain of five Congressmen make it a drawn battle, with a prospect of a magnificent fight between now and the Presidential election. The Democrats are exultant and the Republicans are far from despondent in that State

Ohio.

The Journal's Columbus special says the Republican majorities are continually increasing and the strongest candidates will have over 10,000 majority, while Barnes will get nearly 7,000.

West Virginia.

WHEELING, Oct 13.—Ohio county gives a Democratic majority of 189 on the vote for Governor. Returns from the interior are coming in slowly. They generally show an increased Democratic majority. The State will probably go Democratic by 12,000 majority.

A special from the Chicago Tribune's Washington correspondent says the reason why the West Virginia vote is so largely Democratic is because the disabilities of a great number of rebels have been removed since the last election.

The Indiana Defeat Explained.

It is believed here that Wolcott's withdrawal in Indiana was an injury to the Republicans, and that had he retained his place, the Democrats would have been defeated.

Tilden to Leave New York.

Gen Young of Georgia, Democratic ex-member of Congress, who is just from New York, represents the outlook in that State for Tilden as decidedly encouraging. Gov. Tilden told him a week ago that if he could not sweep the State he would move out of it.

Congressional Nominations.

MARSHALL, Ill., Oct 13.—The Republicans of the 15th Congressional district to-day nominated Geo. D Chaffee.

How the Election News was Received at Washington.

The Tribune's Washington correspondent says the election returns were scanned very closely here throughout the day by the managers of both political parties. Neither could concede considerable disappointment. The Republicans had confidently hoped for a great victory in Indiana, that the election of four Congressmen, which, according to the present returns, seems to be all the Republicans can claim, only except a greatly reduced Democratic majority. The Democratic managers, however, notwithstanding their forced exclamations over the assumed success by the pleasure majority of the Indiana State ticket, could not conceal their deep chagrin at the loss of certainly 10 Congressmen in the two States Some managers were frank enough to admit privately that this repeal is a condemnation by the people of methods of the Confederate House. It had been hoped by the Democrats that Hendricks in his own state at least, would have obtained a large majority, as he was nominated at St. Louis for the purpose of securing it beyond question

Colorado Election.

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 13.—A Denver special says La Plata county, claimed by the Republicans, gives 103 Democratic majority for Patterson for Congress Hinsdale, Saguache and Rio Grande counties must be officially reported to determine the result, though the Republican State ticket will be successful by a meagre majority.

Cox Renominated.

NEW YORK, Oct 13.—The anti Tammany Congressional district convention nominated Hon. S. S. Cox to night.

Indiana Election.

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 13.—Ninety counties, all official except three or four, give Williams 4,719 majority. The counties not heard from gave a Democratic majority in 1872 of 178. The Democrats claim this will be increased four or five hundred. The following are the official estimates of the majorities on the Congressional ticket: First, Fulton, Dem., estimated at 1,500; second, Cobb, Dem, 5,000; third, Bicknell, Democrat, estimated at 5,100; 4th, Sexton, Rep., official, 317; 5th, Brown, Rep., estimated, 1,800; 6th, Robinson, Rep, official, 302; 7th; Hanna, Rep., partly estimated, 1,000; 8th, Hunter Rep., official, 1,080; 9th, White, Rep., official, 1,272, 10th, Calkens, Rep., 1,200; 11th, Evans Rep., estimated, 1,200; 12th, Hamilton, Dem., estimated, 540, 13th, Baker, Rep., estimated, 2,308.

LONDON, Oct. 14.—A dispatch from Vienna says: An understanding on the Eastern question between Russia and Austria is considered certain, notwithstanding contrary rumors

A telegram from Constantinople says the Porte's note to the ambassadors is very conciliatory. The proposal for five months' armistice is merely a wish and not a condition.

She reports a large amount of treasure on the way down. The Discovery Company have made a new strike on McDame's creek, and a new hill strike is reported on Thibert creek. Good prospects at Rapid river and Roseles creek The weather was cold and clear, and indications of an early winter. About 150 miners will winter at Cassiar.

It is estimated that about one hundred persons have left the city during the past few days for Deception Inlet, on Leach river, a few miles from here where the late gold discovery was made, and good news is expected from there shortly.

Smallpox.

The body of an unknown was found in the bushes a day or two since who had died of smallpox. The mayor has taken steps to prevent Indians from coming into town during the prevalence of smallpox among them, and all Indians in town have been ordered to remove some distance outside the city, and special constables are engaged to watch them Two white men living in the neighborhood of Cormorant street have been attacked with the disease.

Entertainment for the Children.

Between two and three hundred children were entertained at a party at Government House yesterday by Lieut. Governor Richards and lady.

The Dakota sailed from Port Townsend for San Francisco at 6 o'clock this morning

A dispatch from J. Brandt, Jr., to Sol Abrahams says, in regard to the Lucky Queen mine: "I received a letter from Ascell, and he says 25 tons of such rock as he is getting now will pay for the mill, and that there will be no trouble in getting 500 tons of such rock."

STATE FAIR.

SIXTEENTH ANNUAL FAIR OF THE OREGON STATE AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.

Fifth Day.

SALEM, Oct 13, 1876

Still the rain holds off and the people are taking advantage of the suspension for the purpose of sight seeing and enjoyment The air is cool, bracing and pleasant, although the sun does not shine. There has not been as many in attendance this week as there was last year, and not by a good deal the amount of money being expended, as the general remark is, "I have not yet sold my wheat."

The train that left last evening (Thursday) was the longest one of the week, and came near causing several runaways, as three or four teams commenced plunging, and if not restrained by friendly hands, undoubtedly several would have been badly injured, if not killed outright. The main portion of

THE PAVILION

Is now in condition to be examined. As you enter the north door, on the right the OREGONIAN headquarters is announced, where Mr Geo. W. Pittock presides with commendable politeness and energy. He will be the most extensively known man in Oregon. The other papers also have sonably established themselves alongside. In front of the organ and piano department, wherein Whitney & Homes organs, J. H. Bobbins is agent; Webber piano and standard organs, A. L. Frances agent for Sherman & Hyde, of Portland. These instruments have been constantly kept in use by all classes of players, and congregates a large crowd around them, causing a complete jam in front of our desk. The sewing machines come next, and several manufacturing companies are represented, among them the New Howe, Wheeler & Wilson, Singer, Florence, and others too numerous to mention. These machines constantly attract a crowd, and the volubility of the explanation of the virtues of these machines by the different agents is truly astonishing. J. W. Crawford stands close by with a fine collection of his tinware establishment of Salem, and causes many expressions of surprise at the completeness of the collection. Mrs. J. DeVore Johnson has succeeded in arranging her department, "arts," in a far superior manner than has ever been before, and much credit is due to this lady for her energy and taste The collection is much larger than ever before, and consists of all kinds, and shapes and sizes of frames, making it quite difficult for any person to arrange them in the limited space allotted them. The floral and millinery departments have been noticed, and we will now pass to the farming departments in the other part of the pavilion.

GARDEN PRODUCTS.

This department is much superior to any exhibit of former years, and shows that the soil of Oregon, when properly cultivated, is capable of producing equal to any country that has the same temperature of climate.

P. M. Rinearson, of Oregon City, has a good display from his farm, and he has been awarded quite a number of premiums. He has on exhibition two squashes, one weighing 153 and the other 177 pounds, the latter measuring six feet in circumference. These are considered the largest that have been shown.

John Cassidy carries off the premium for the largest onions, and they would pass muster in any country.

Mrs. M. Higley has the best beets on show, so the committee says, also cauliflower, and the largest collection of herbs.

Mrs DeLashmutt has a splendid lot of vegetables, and continues to keep up her reputation as a progressive farmer, and her new potatoes clean the table.

J. B. Dimick is the potato man, decidedly he is, and has seventeen varieties on the shelves, and they are "whoppers," in fact too much "tater," rather overgrown, but still they show what the beaver dam land will do.

John Ascroft, who lives in Wasco county, has some potatoes from his garden, grown in the bunch grass land, which are of first quality in flavor and size,

W H Adair has a large collection from his garden, and for variety is the best display, but did not succeed in carrying away all the premiums, but still enough to encourage him for further efforts.

There was a large increase of new varieties; so it may appear to many who came to this country in an early day and from the frontier at the time of immigration. There are some cornstalks measuring 12 feet, but I do not consider that these properly represent the climate for that species of grain, as this is not a good corn country.

FRUITS

T. J. Tooley, of Nanconver, W. T., has on exhibition a plate of his new variety of seedling peaches, and has been awarded two premiums on the same—one for new variety and the other for the best plate. S. Luelling & Son have a large and full display of apples, which indicates that they are still progressing in their occupation as nurserymen. They also exhibit pears, prunes, peaches, plums, grapes, blackberries and other fruits in profusion. This firm have been awarded the gold medal for the largest and best display of fruit.

G. W Walling & Son are not disposed to be ignored in the fruit business by considerable, and in number and variety this firm have closely contested the honors for display, and made it decidedly interesting for the awarding committee. The display of dried fruits, such as prunes, plums, cherries, pears, etc, is excellent, and has been awarded several premiums. The display of preserved fruits was not entered for premiums, but show that they can be made beautiful as well as useful.

Joseph Hamilton has a small but very choice collection of apples, pears, etc, and has won some premiums, and for the most handsomely arranged basket of winter fruit the second premium, which is saying considerable considering with what he had to contend against.

BREAD, CAKES AND PRESERVES.

This department is more extensive and superior in quality than in former years, the articles are arranged more systematically, and could be examined with accuracy and justice. Miss Ella Kinney was awarded 1st premium for best assortment of cakes Miss Mary A. Dimick won five first and ten second premiums on dried fruits, which speaks well for that young lady's culture in that department Among the cordials and jellies, Mrs. S. A. Condit and Miss Ella Kinney contested for the premiums with considerable spirit, while Miss Angie Ford carried away the ribbons on wines Mrs. A A McAlly is a splendid pastry cook, we know this by the premiums awarded and the tasting of some by the reporters of the press, who are undoubted judges of everything that is good to eat. Mrs J. Condit, on canned fruit, won the first premium. In preserves this same lady won the first for the best assortment, also in quince preserve Mrs S G. Kemp, tomato catsup, 1st p. T. Beard, Portland, best five pounds box honey, 1st p Mrs. J V. Taylor, tomato figs.

H. KELLY

Has on exhibition different varieties of his dried or condensed fruit, and is kept quite busy in answering all kinds of questions, and is advertising his machines to the thousands

PERCHERONS.

This noble stock of horses is on exhibition in greater numbers than ever before at any State or county Fair on this coast. The veteran "White Prince," owned by Mr. W C Myer, of Jackson county, heads the list, and in his train we noticed "White Rose," "Pride of Perche," and others too well known by the public to need extensive mention here. A few animals, however, that have not previously been on exhibition require a separate mention at our hands

JENNIE,

A 15-16ths-blood filly, brought from the East by Mr. Myer last winter, we notice first This beautiful animal weighs nearly 1,500 pounds, and her form and carriage so indicate the mature horse that it seems difficult for many to believe that she is only 25 months old.

GEN. MURAT,

A two-year old colt belonging to Bonney & Jones, of Wasco county, claims a large share of the attention of the public. He stands 16½ hand in height, and though in only moderate condition weighs over 1,400. This colt is from White Prince and Mr. Myer's full blooded mare Doll, and consequently a full blood. He begins to show a good length of body, and it is the opinion of the public generally that at maturity he will equal and perhaps excel his imported progenitor, showing that the full bloods of this stock produced in this country do not deteriorate, but rather improve under the influence of Oregon feed and climate. No one ventured to enter against this noble animal, and in the show ring he walked off with the laurels without competition.

Another great attraction among this class of horses is a large, fine, well-built filly. Exhibited with it is a spotted Cayuse pony. This filly and dam being exhibited side by side illustrates very forcibly the wonderful powers of the Percheron horse to produce his like when crossed on the common stock of the country. Quite a number of quarter-blood colts are also on exhibition, and even they, too, exhibit in a marked degree the size, form and style peculiar to this stock. The latter were not entered for premiums, there being no premiums offered for colts. Among the specimens of this stock we note of quite a number of ribbons, showing that they carried off a respectable share of the

The Daily Oregonian.

SATURDAY MORNING, OCTOBER 14, 1876.

THE "SOLID SOUTH."

In estimating the probable result of the November election the claim of the Democracy that they have the South solid must be conceded. The Republicans can count on so little help from the States lately in rebellion that it is practically true the South is united against the Republican party. Could Hayes hope for any considerable strength from the South the chance of a Democratic success would not be worthy of so much as a passing notice. The Democrats hope to win, if they really have any hope of success, by adding to the solid South such scattering votes as may happen to fall to them in the fluctuations of party feeling at the North.

When one glances over the history of the past and reflects upon the circumstances that have solidified the South for the Democratic party, the fact that it is solid is seen to do no credit to the sincerity of the Northern Democrats, nor to the intelligence and sagacity of the South. It is not the first time in the history of American politics that the South has been solid, and it is not the first time the Northern Democracy have been responsible for its being solid and for the consequences thereof. In 1861 the South was solid in its attempt to overthrow the Union by armed force. The Southern people could never have been united on such a purpose, nor would they solid to have staked everything as they did, against such desperate a game had not the Northern Democracy given them to understand that their own political power in the North would be used to insure the success of the scheme of disunion. Every man not mad with passion, who voted in a Southern convention, did so with the promise distinctly before his mind of help from the North, in the way of embarrassments to the Republican administration in its prosecution of any plan of coercion. That was the fact that made a solid South possible, and produced a war which cost hundreds of thousands of lives, cost the Southern people their fortunes, cost the industries of the country for a time their existence, cost the government billions of money, cost the whole people more sorrow and suffering than a score of such struggles as that through which our forefathers passed the liberty their children celebrate with so much patriotic ardor in this centennial year. The Northern Democracy made the South solid with promises they would not or dared not fulfill, and the country reaped the fruit of her misplaced confidence in such a harvest of ills as all the future ages of mankind must leave half untold forever.

When the war was ended the victorious North could afford to be generous. The terrible conflict had not effaced the memory of a common ancestry and a common history, nor eradicated the sentiment of brotherhood from hearts that had been brave enough to meet the deadly shock of battle for their country. Scarcely had hostilities ceased, when a Republican administration and a Republican Congress entered upon a policy intended to restore fraternal feeling by treating the South that no vindictive or unjust measures toward her people should be adopted. The military was withdrawn from the States lately in rebellion, their governments were reorganized as soon as practicable, and sooner than was safe, as subsequent events have shown, and in a very brief period their representatives again sat in the halls of Congress, the peers of those who had never imbrued their hands in the blood of their brethren in an endeavor to destroy the Union. At first there was manifested generally in the South a disposition to accept the situation in good faith, enter heartily into relations of amity with the North, and second the plans of the Republican party for the re-establishment of law, order, peace and prosperity. But soon they were seduced by the Democracy into adopting a suicidal policy of proscription and violence. Selfishly bent on the acquisition of power, the Northern obstructionists began working up among the Southern people the old cry of injustice against the colored people, and charged the Northern people who went South to reside. The evils inevitably attendant upon the chaotic state of society were magnified to unnatural proportions, and were attributed wholly to the Republican party and to the Northern adventurers and carpet-baggers—a class deserving no little censure, but not responsible for all, or the hundredth part of the frauds and villainies credited to them. Parties were formed "on the color line," and wherever the Republican side of the line was the most numerous in consequence of the large colored population, violence and intimidation were relied upon to overcome the majorities. The shotgun and the rifle were the auxiliaries of the ballot. And it is by this means the South is now rendered solid for the Democratic party.

It does seem as if the statesmanship for which the North was for a long time distinguished, had utterly died out, else the intelligent and educated white people of that section would see what a fatal folly they commit in following the fortunes of the Northern Democrats. Nothing short of fanaticism amounting to madness, could prevent any rational man from seeing that this course of proscription, violence and intimidation must ere long unite the North against the people practicing it, just as the North was united by the firing upon the flag in 1861. And what will a solid South amount to against a solid North? The arraying of one section against the other, either in politics or in arms, cannot but be productive of great evils; but if there is nothing else possible the North will not hesitate to accept the issue. And it will be the same in the peaceful strife of the ballot box as it was in the clash of arms:

"God help them if the tempest swing
The Pine against the Palm."

The solid South will find her worst misfortune in the fact of her solidity. The Democrats of the North will find too, that their desperate schemes for power, are all unavailing. The great Northern heart will be fired by the outrages upon the colored people as quickly as it was in the old bitter days. Every colored voter murdered in the South will make ten Republican voters in the North whenever it comes to be seen by the masses of the North that the Constitutional rights of the colored people are to be persistently trampled upon by the Democrats. Two years of a Democratic administration sustaining the color-liners of the South and denying the protection of the general government to the colored people, would turn over every Northern State to the Republicans and give them a two-thirds majority in Congress. Where are the statesmen of the South, the friends of the Southern people, the leaders of Southern political society, that no warning is sounded in the ears of the white people to keep them from this fatal alliance with the reactionary Bourbons of the North? The days of a solid South maintaining its solidity by forcibly depriving the colored citizen of the rights of citizenship and humanity, will be short and the end disastrous.

OHIO AND INDIANA.

Mr. Geo. A. Steel, Chairman of the Republican State Central Committee of this State, received yesterday late in the afternoon the following dispatch, which speaks for itself:

NEW YORK, Oct. 13, 1876.

To Geo. A. Steel, Chairman Republican State Central Committee: Republican majority in Ohio nine thousand, and gain six Congressmen. In Indiana we gain four Congressmen. Democrats have the governor by a small majority.

R. G. McCORMICK,
Sec'y Rep. Nat'l Com.

And the next Congress will be Republican by from 20 to 30 majority.

When the civil service reform is brought to a reasonable state of perfection—by which we do not mean the impractical perfection demanded by theorists and visionaries, but a perfection easily attainable by imperfect human nature—the public servant whose time is paid for out of the public treasury will devote himself to his official duties instead of running up and down the country as a political "worker," or pursuing his private business to the neglect of the public service. Many officers, Federal, State and municipal, hold their positions as personal perquisites, draw their salaries regularly, and devote their time mainly to their private occupations. A man who receives a salary from a State or city for his time, owes that time to the employer, as much as a merchant's book-keeper owes his time to the merchant. An officer whose public employment contemplates and requires his constant attention, as nearly all offices do, but who is pursuing a regular occupation or trade on his own account, no matter what his office may be, from the lowest in the Portland corporation to the highest in the United States government, is unfit for his place, and should be exchanged for one who is willing to give honest service for honest pay. The people can not afford in these hard times to pay men for their time and not get it.

Our cable-dispatches this morning represent the situation in Eastern Europe as critical in the extreme. The proposed armistice is not accepted by the revolted provinces, and Russia is represented as sustaining them in their refusal. Turkey, and those powers that incline to side with her, are very desirous the armistice should be concluded and should extend through the winter. If the war is to be prosecuted, Turkey would be greatly benefited by a suspension of hostilities through the winter months, military operations during the inclement season being very difficult for the invading army. The provinces, on the other hand, being on their own soil and backed by the people of the country, would naturally wish to make the most of the advantages which winter will afford them. It begins to look as if a war, involving the principal nations of Europe, were imminent.

The Republicans, although they failed to elect their candidate for Governor of Indiana, have made very encouraging and substantial gains. They have gained four Congressmen, and secured both branches of the Legislature of that State; and in Ohio they have carried the State ticket by a majority of 7,000—1,500 more than their majority of last year—and have gained six Congressmen. The prospect is fair, not only for the election of Hayes and Wheeler, but for restoring Congress to the Republicans, allowing similar gains in the other Northern and hitherto Republican States.

We have not yet yet been advised of Mr. Lane's explanation of his vote for repealing the law for resumption of specie payments. We call on him to state this evening why he so voted? Why he went back on all his former professions, and joined the rag-money crowd? Why he voted to make Oregon, which has always adhered to hard money, a lay figure in the beggar's opera?

This evening Richard Williams and Lafayette Lane will debate political questions in this city. The regular club meeting of the Hayes and Wheeler club of course gives way to the joint discussion. Let there be a full attendance. Voters should go and hear the candidates, and thus enable them to form an intelligent judgment as to their duty on election day.

After a second call, the House took a recess for 15 minutes. Being again called to order, a quorum was present, and the further call of the House was dispensed with.

Goodman, of the joint committee on railroads, asked and obtained leave to present a report from that committee, and reported H. B. 150, being a bill to regulate freights and fares on the railroads of this State; read first time and ordered printed.

H. B. 128—To authorize the Calapooia Boom Co. to construct and maintain a boom, or booms, in the Calapooia creek for ten years; read a third time and passed.

The joint committee on capitol building presented the following report, which was read and placed on file:

Mr. Speaker: Your joint committee appointed under S. J. R. 4, have examined the capitol building, and respectfully report that they find the material used in the construction of said building uniformly of good quality, and that the work has been done in a good, substantial and workmanlike manner, with the following exceptions:

The lumber used in laying the floors has been very imperfectly seasoned, and the floors have not been smoothed off nor deafened according to the specifications.

The upper flight of stairs is not sufficiently supported, and the hand rail has not been worked down to a smooth surface and polished according to specifications.

The water closets are not furnished according to the specifications. The rooms are not properly ventilated, and below the basement floors there is no ventilation of any value whatever.

The glass is of an inferior quality to that required by the specifications.

The plastering has not been finished in accordance with the specifications, and the ceilings are irregular.

It is the opinion of your committee the architect has committed an error in the location of the treasurer's vault, and that the late superintendent is responsible for all defects in material and workmanship.

It is also the opinion of your committee, after a thorough examination of the capitol building, that for the protection of the same it is absolutely necessary that the external portion, with the exception of the dome, should be finished as soon as possible, and for that purpose your committee would respectfully submit the bill accompanying this report for the consideration of the House.

(Signed) E. J. GOULD,
Chairman Committee.

The bill accompanying the report appropriates $75,000 for the purposes set forth in the report, and was read a first time and ordered printed.

CARPE DIEM

Lord Houghton writes a delightful little poem called Carpe Diem, which runs as follows:

Youth that pursueth with such eager pace
Thy even way
Thou paintest on to win a mournful race
Then stop O stay

Pause and inquiriate in thy sunny plain
Lotter—ill
Once past, that never will come back again
A accusing boy

The hills of manhood wear a troll face
When seen from far
The mist of light, here which they talk their grae
Hides what they are

The deep and dreary path those cliffs between
Thou canst not know
And how [illegible] so never green
Dead fields of snow

Pause while thou mayst, nor deem that fate thy gain
Which all too fast
Will drive thee forth from this delicious plain
A man at last. —Appleton's Journal

MY LITTLE SCHOOL GIRL

LOUISA M ALCOTT

The first time I saw her was one autumn morning as I rode to town in a horse car. It was early, and my only fellow passenger was a grimy old gentleman who sat in a corner reading his paper so that when the car stopped I glanced out to see who came in, hoping it would be a pleasanter person. No one appeared for a minute and the car stood still, while both driver and conductor looked in the same direction without a sign of impatience. I looked also, but all I could see was a little girl running across the park as little girls of 12 or 13 seldom run nowadays if any one can see them.

"Are you waiting for her?" I asked of the pale-faced conductor who stood with his hand on the bell and a good natured smile in his eyes.

"Yes, ma'am, we always stop for little miss. She just then up she came all rosy and out of breath with her run.

"Thank you very much. I'm late to-day and was afraid I should miss my car," she said, as he helped her with a fatherly air that [illegible] to see. Taking a corner seat she [illegible] curly locks, disturbed by the [illegible] put on her gloves and settled her [illegible] in her lap, and then modestly glanced at the old gentleman in the opposite corner to see if [illegible] near by. Such a bright little face as I saw under the brown hat rim happy blue eyes, dimples in the ruddy cheeks, and the [illegible] expression which makes a young girl so sweet an object to the old eyes.

The crusty gentleman evidently agreed with me, for he peeped over the top of the paper at the little neighbor as she sat stitching away, and cheering herself with occasional sniffs of mignonette and sweet peas. The old gentleman caught my eyes he [illegible] out of sight with a loud "hem!" but he [illegible] directly, for there was something very attractive about the unconscious face, and one could no more help looking at her than at a lovely flower or [illegible].

Presently she shut her book with a decided bang and an air of relief that amused me. She saw the half smile I could not repress, seemed to need my sympathy, and said with a sigh, "It was a hard lesson, but I've got it!" Then she began to talk about school and lessons, and I soon decided that the girl was a clever child whose only drawback was, as she said herself, a "love of fun."

She was just telling quite friendly when a man got in one of whom stared at the child till [illegible] she observed it, and I saw by the color that [illegible] in her cheeks. It annoyed me [illegible] she had to [illegible] my own little [illegible] I like [illegible] ly, and have often [illegible] by the forward manner of [illegible] ed to enjoy being [illegible] So I helped this one out of her [illegible] by making room between the [illegible] and my [illegible] and watching her [illegible] at [illegible]. She understood at [illegible] me with a look, and nestled [illegible] as gratefully that the old [illegible] over his spectacles to the [illegible] who had [illegible] the serenity of [illegible].

[illegible] along again, the car got [illegible] fuller as we got down town. [illegible] her [illegible], with a baby, got [illegible]. I could offer my seat my little [illegible] in out of here, with a polite [illegible], ma'am; I can stand perfectly [illegible].

[illegible] days, and I valued the small [illegible] because it evidently [illegible] an effort to stand up [illegible] full of strangers, [illegible] ally as [illegible] the strap to steady her[illegible] difficult to stand comfortably.

It was that the crusty man showed [illegible] ved my girl's good manners, [illegible] his cane in the strap and gave [illegible] with a smile that lighted up [illegible] like sunshine:

"Much obliged to that, my dear."

I caught it, "how little we can judge [illegible] this. This grim old soul is a [illegible] after all."

Then her face toward us, the girl held [illegible] great cane, and swayed easily to and [illegible] hampered exercise rails. The Irish [illegible], a sickly little thing, was at [illegible] the flowers, and put out a small [illegible] them, with a wistful look at [illegible].

"Do you have some?" said my girl and [illegible] gesture happy with a gay [illegible] and some red leaves.

"She's fond, honey, its fond he is of them, and seldom he gets any," [illegible], gratefully, as she settled [illegible] hood, and wrapped the old shawl [illegible].

I looked at the giver of posies but [illegible] eyes gave no offense, and soon [illegible] were so friendly that baby boldly [illegible] at the bright buttons on her sack, [illegible] with delight when he got one. [illegible] all smiled at the pretty play and [illegible] when the little lady, with a bow [illegible] got out at the church corner.

"Now [illegible] probably never see that child [illegible] what a pleasant picture she leaves [illegible] memory," I thought to myself as I [illegible] last glimpse of the brown hat going [illegible] the corner.

But I did see her again many times, that [illegible] for not long after, as I passed down a [illegible] in a car near my winter quarters, I came [illegible] a flock of girls eating their luncheon [illegible] they walked along on the sunny side—[illegible] merry creatures, all laughing and cha[illegible] at once, as they tossed apples from hand [illegible] hand, or munched candy, or compared [illegible]. I went slowly, to enjoy the sight [illegible] as I do when I meet a party of sparrows on the common, and was wondering what would [illegible] some of so many budding women, when [illegible] all of a sudden, I saw my little school girl.

Yes, I knew her in a minute, for she wore the same brown hat and the rosy face was sparkling with fun, as she told secrets with a [illegible] friend, while eating a wholesome slice [illegible] of bread and butter, as only a hungry school girl could. She did not recognize me but I took a good look at her as I went by, longing to know what the particular secret was that [illegible] in such a gale of laughter.

After that, I often saw my girl as I took my walks abroad, and, one day, could not resist [illegible] waking to her when I met her alone for [illegible] usually her mates clustered around her like [illegible] bees about their queen, which pleased me since it showed how much they loved the sunshiny child.

I had a paper of grapes in my hand and when I saw her coming whisked out a handsome bunch all ready to offer for I had made up my mind to speak this time. She was reading a paper but looked up to give me the [illegible] of the walk. Before her eyes could [illegible] again, I held out the grapes and said just as I had heard her say more than once to a school-mate at lunch time, "Let's go halves."

She understood at once, laughed, and took the bunch, saying with twinkling eyes:

"O thank you! They are beauties."

Then as we went on to the corner together I told her why I did it and recalled the circumstance. I'd forgotten all about that but my conductor is very kind and always waits for me," she said, evidently surprised that a stranger should take an interest in her small self. I did not have half time enough with her, for a bell rang and away she skipped looking back to nod and smile at the queer lady who had taken a fancy to her. A few days after, and a fine nosegay of flowers was left at the door for me, and when I asked the [illegible] sent them he answered:

"A little girl asked if a lame lady didn't live here, and when I said yes, she told me to give you these, and say, 'The grapes were very [illegible] was if was, and I'm glad this [illegible] funny message immensely, for when one leads a quiet life, little things interest and amuse.

Christmas was close by, and I planned a return for the flowers of a sort that I fancied my young friend would appreciate. I knew that Christmas week would be a holiday so the day before it began I went to the school just before recess, and left a great plummy cake directed to "Miss Goldilocks from she knows who."

At first I did not know how to address my nice white paper, I never had met the child's name. But after thinking over the matter I remembered that she was the only girl in town with curls, and I addressed with a flourish. The next week I received a private note, scrawled and blotted hugely, which made me happy for days. It was from the little girl herself, and ran thus:

"I recently saw little hats be[illegible] to go by the school street I teche with laughter and the sidewalk to bloom with gay, why for the girls were all out in winter clothes now. From behind a curtain I peeped at them, and saw with great satisfaction that nearly all had bits of my cake in their hands and were talking over it with the most flattering interest. My particular little girl with a friend on each arm passed so near me that I could see the happy look in her eyes and hear her say with a toss of the bright hair:

"Mother will plan it for me and I can get at dost by New Year. We'll be fun to hang it on the door some day and then run."

I fancied that she meant to make something for me, and waited with patient wonder to know this old frolic with my little playmate would end.

New Years day came and passed but no gift hung on my door so I made up my mind it was all a mistake and being pretty busy about that time thought no more of the matter till some weeks later as I came into town one day after a visit to the country I and found of observing faces and seldom forget one if anything has particularly attracted my attention to it. So, this morning, as I rode along I looked at the conductor, as there was no one else to observe and he had a pleasant sort of a face. Somehow it looked familiar and after thinking idly about it for a minute I remembered where I had seen it before.

He was the man who waited for little miss and I at once began to hope that she would come again, for I was dated to ask about the holidays.

When we came to the South end square where I met her first, I looked out, expecting to see the little figure running down the wide path again, and quite willing to wait for it a long time if necessary. But no one was to be seen but two boys and a dog. The car did not stop, and though the conductor looked out that way his hand was not on the strap, and no smile on his face.

Don't you wait for the little girl now? I asked feeling disappointed at not seeing my pretty friend again.

I wish I could ma'am answered the man understanding at once though of course he did not remember me.

New rules, perhaps? I added [illegible] he did not explain but stood fingering his pencils and never minding an old lady, wildly waving her bag at him from the sidewalk.

No, ma'am, but it's no use waiting for little missy any more because"—here he leaned in and said very low— she is dead; then turned sharply round, rung the bell, put the old lady in and shut the door.

How grieved I was to have that pleasant friendship end so sadly, for I had planned many small surprises for my girl, and now I could do no more, could never know all about her never see the funny face again, or win another word from lips that seemed made for smiling.

Only a little school girl yet how many friends she seemed to have, making them unconsciously by her gentle manners, generous actions, and innocent light heartedness. I could not bear to think what home must be without her, for I am sure I was right in believing her a good, sweet child because real character shows itself in little things, and the heart that always keeps in tune makes its music heard everywhere.

The busy man of the horse car found time to miss her, the schoolmates evidently mourned their queen, for when I met them they walked quietly, talked low, and several wore black bows upon the sleeve; while I although I never knew her name or learned a single fact about her felt the sweetness of her happy nature, and have not yet forgotten my little school-[illegible].
